

Design Report

I'll start by stating I really like responsive design and try using it any chance I can get. Since we're working with pure CSS and I can't import Bootstrap, I've made do with what I know how to do. I also prefer flat design and have implemented it in text and layout.

I wanted to try cards as well, as I see the content layout a lot and thought it would be neat. Sadly, I don't think I quite threaded the needle. I blame my decision to use grids and while I think I could have still made it work with more tweaking; I was starting to run on fumes and couldn't concentrate much more.

Same reason I was stuck with placeholder content. I had some trouble with coming up with material for a site this size (too few pages for some, too many for others) and had at one point thought about some info snippets about some of my favorite art styles and structures (Exquisite Corpse is a fun one) but just couldn't come up with enough material in time.
